The strongest arguments are clearly supported with relevant evidence. (Kalm Saliba/Getty Images) Any of the 40 statements or positions below may be either defended or attacked in an argumentative essay or speech. In choosing something to write about, keep in mind Kurt Vonnegut's advice: "Find a subject you care about and which you in your heart feel others should care about." But be sure to rely on your head as well as your heart: select a topic that you know something about, either from your own experience or from that of others. Your instructor should let you know whether formal research is encouraged or even required for this assignment. Because many of these issues are complex and wide-ranging, you should be prepared to narrow your topic and focus your approach. Selecting a position is only the first step, and you must learn to prepare and develop your position persuasively. At the end of the following list, you'll find links to a number of argumentative paragraphs and essays. Dieting makes people fat. Romantic love is a poor basis for marriage. The war on terror has contributed to the growing abuse of human rights. High school graduates should take a year off before entering college. All citizens should be required by law to vote. All forms of government-funded welfare should be abolished. Both parents should assume equal responsibility in raising a child. Americans should have more holidays and longer vacations. Participating in team sports helps to develop good character. The production and sale of cigarettes should be made illegal. People have become overly dependent on technology. Censorship is sometimes justified. Privacy is not the most important right. Drunk drivers should be imprisoned for the first offense. The lost art of letter-writing deserves to be revived. Government and military personnel should have the right to strike. Most study-abroad programs should be renamed "party abroad": they are a waste of time and money The continuing decline of CD sales along with the rapid growth of music downloads signals a new era of innovation in popular music. College students should have complete freedom to choose their own courses. The solution to the impending crisis in Social Security is the immediate elimination of this government program. The primary mission of colleges and universities should be preparing students for the workforce. Financial incentives should be offered to high school students who perform well on standardized tests. All students in high school and college should be required to take at least two years of a foreign language. College students in the U.S. should be offered financial incentives to graduate in three years rather than four. College athletes should be exempted from regular class-attendance policies. To encourage healthy eating, higher taxes should be imposed on soft drinks and junk food. Students should not be required to take physical education courses. To conserve fuel and save lives, the 55 miles-per-hour national speed limit should be restored. All citizens under the age of 21 should be required to pass a driving education course before receiving a license to drive. Any student caught cheating on an examination should be automatically dismissed from college. Freshmen should not be required to purchase a meal plan from the college. Zoos are internment camps for animals and should be shut down. University students should not be penalized for illegally downloading music, movies, or other protected content. Government financial aid for students should be based solely on merit. Nontraditional students should be exempted from regular class-attendance policies. At the end of each term, student evaluations of faculty should be posted online. A student organization should be formed to rescue and care for the feral cats on campus. People who contribute to Social Security should have the right to choose how their money is invested. Professional baseball players convicted of using performance-enhancing drugs should not be considered for induction into the Hall of Fame. Any citizen who does not have a criminal record should be permitted to carry a concealed weapon. Calculating simple interest is an essential skill for anyone who maintains a bank account, carries a credit card balance, or applies for a loan. The free printable worksheets in this lesson will improve your homeschool math lessons and help your students become better at calculations. This collection of worksheets will also help students understand the process using word problems. Answers are provided for each of the five worksheets on the second page for ease of grading. Before having students start on the worksheets, explain that when you borrow money, you have to repay the amount you borrowed as well as any added interest charges, which represents the cost of borrowing. In the same way, explain to students that when you lend money or deposit funds in interest-bearing accounts, you typically earn interest income for making your money available to other people. D. Russell Print the PDF: Simple Interest Worksheet No. 1 In this exercise, students will answer 10 word problems about calculating interest. These exercises will help homeschoolers learn how to calculate the rate of return on investments and illustrate how interest can accrue over time. Students will answer such questions as, "How much interest does a $318 investment earn at 9 percent over one year?" Explain to students that the answer would be $28.62 because $$318 \times 9$ percent is the same as $$318 \times 0.09$, which equals $28.62. Explain to students that they would have to pay this amount of interest in addition to repaying the principal, the amount of the original loan, $318. D. Russell Print the PDF: Simple Interest Worksheet No. 2 These 10 questions will reinforce the lessons from worksheet No. 1. Homeschoolers and other students will learn how to calculate rates and determine interest payments. For this PDF, students will answer word problem questions such as: "If the balance at the end of eight years on an investment of $630 that has been invested at a rate of 9 percent is $1,083.60, how much was the interest?" If students are struggling, explain that calculating this answer involves only simple subtraction, where you subtract the initial investment of $630 from the ending balance of $1,083.60. Students would set up the problem as follows: $$1,083.60 - $630 = $453.60$ Explain that some of the information in the question was extraneous and not necessary to solve the problem. For this problem, you don't need to know the years of the loan (eight years) or even the interest rate; you only need to know the beginning and ending balance. D. Russell Print the PDF: Simple Interest Worksheet No. 3 Use these word questions to continue practicing how to calculate simple interest. Students can also use this exercise to learn about the principal, rate of return (the net gain or loss on an investment over a specified time), and other terms commonly used in finance. D. Russell Print the PDF: Simple Interest Worksheet No. 4 Teach your students the basics of investing and how to determine which investments will pay the most over time. This worksheet will help your homeschoolers polish their calculating skills. D. Russell Print the PDF: Simple Interest Worksheet No. 5 Use this final worksheet to review the steps for calculating simple interest. Take time to answer questions your homeschoolers may have about how banks and investors use interest calculations. Opinions expressed by Entrepreneur contributors are their own. The term "authorpreneur" has become more common recently. Many entrepreneurs, coaches, consultants, attorneys, psychologists and other experts are grabbing on to this trend. Writing and publishing a book (whether through a traditional publishing contract or by self-publishing) is a great way to stand out as an expert in your field. But without a good plan in advance, you risk all of your hard work becoming nothing more than a really nice business card. (You also risk not finishing your book at all.)1. Do I have a clear idea of who is my ideal client?Most service-based entrepreneurs and experts can't get away with being generalists nowadays. Before spending time (and possibly money if you need a qualified book or writing coach, not to mention things like book covers, editing or proofreading if you're self-publishing) writing a book, carefully consider who is your ideal client. Because this person is usually also what I call your ideal reader.Why is your ideal client so important? Because you want to make sure everything in your book speaks to this person. You want to speak to their pain points. And, without being sleazy or sales-y, explain how you can resolve their pain. (Just a pro tip: you're going to have more liberty to do this when you self-publish.)For example, I help entrepreneurs, coaches, consultants, attorneys, psychologists and other experts increase their visibility, credibility and market reach through the power of writing and publishing a book. In my writings, I address things like folks staring at a blank page, not understanding the nuances of publishing and feeling like they can't write their expert books because they didn't go to school for writing. I share stories, testimonials and concrete steps to help people get those books out of their heads and into reality.What pain points do your clients mention? Listen carefully. You can even use a social audio app such as Clubhouse and listen to what people are discussing in different rooms.Related: 5 Steps to Discovering the Ideal Client Persona for Your High-End Brand2. What is your goal for your business book?While there's nothing wrong with writing and publishing a book for the sheer pleasure of it (crossing that line off your bucket list if you will), most entrepreneurs and other experts have bigger goals.You may end up making six figures in just book sales, but this is often the exception rather than the norm.What's worked well for my clients is to use the book as a platform for getting more speaking gigs (where they can pitch their products or services), use the book as another way to gather leads or use the book to get more media interviews — the list goes on and on.For example, for every 1,000 books you sell, you will probably get 100 people reaching out to you (if what you had to say spoke to them).Depending on your sales process, 50 of them will likely book some type of call with you.Now, your success here will depend on your conversion rates and price points — but let's take an example from one of my clients.Her conversion rate is 50 percent. She sells a $3,000 coaching program. When 50 people book a sales call with her, she closes 25 people.That's $75,000 for every 1,000 people who read her book.Some people have lower conversion rates and price points; others have higher price points or higher conversion rates — but the possibilities are endless.So that's why I cringe when I see so-called book coaches with no writing experience saying that an authorpreneur's claim to fame is selling as many books for as little as possible as quickly as possible.Yes, book sales are important — but it's even more important to use that book as a way to drive more leads to you and increase your credibility in the eyes of conference organizers and the media.That's why it's so important to sit down and look at your overall goals before diving into writing and publishing a book.Related: The World's Best Marketing Tool: Writing a Book3. How much time do you have to write?Some would-be authorpreneurs come to me afraid they don't have time to write, but I promise that you do. Even 25 minutes a week is better than nothing at all.Learn how long it takes you to write 1,000 words. Now that may sound like a lot — but that's the size of an average blog post.If you want to dictate your book, the average person speaks about 150 words per minute.While those using the dictation method of writing a book will definitely need an editor to help clean it up, the average American English speaker uses over 1,000 words in seven minutes.Seven minutes for 1,000 words — consider that. Many entrepreneurs I've met consider themselves better storytellers than writers.It's all the same thing, it's just the medium.If you choose this method and set aside 15 minutes a week, you could have a 20,000-word manuscript in about 10 weeks.Want to go deeper than the minimum required to create a good-sized print and digital book?Then about 30,000 words will take you roughly four months.As you can see, it doesn't take months, years or decades to write an amazing book that will draw more clients to you. While you will need to organize your thoughts into chapters and go through other steps to publish your book (this is where a book or writing coach can really help you out), writing the first draft is not as complicated as a lot of folks think.The key is to start!Related: How to Write a Book (and Actually Finish It) in 5 Steps
